1. An _____ lets a clip's audio continue playing after its video has already cut to the next shot. A _____ is the mirror image — the next clip's audio starts before its video appears.
2. _____ means making a cut in the middle of a continuous physical action, so the motion itself hides the edit.
3. A _____ is a brief shot of something other than the main action, inserted to cover an edit or add context.
4. A _____ connects two shots that share strong visual or compositional similarity, creating a smooth transition between very different subjects.
5. A sequence of short shots edited together to condense time or build a feeling is called a _____.
6. A _____ is a cut between two very similar shots of the same subject that creates a jarring visual "jump" — usually a mistake, unless used deliberately.

Discuss: You're editing a two-person interview and the same speaker's face is on screen for both their question and their answer. What continuity technique would make that feel less static?
